PRESS RELEASE

Europe leads the World in Sustainability, says Ambienta's Nino Tronchetti Provera

- Population growth and booming consumption make sustainability one of the few things we can be sure about
- Human beings are consuming too many natural resources and creating too much pollution
- Watch Ambienta In Conversation with Francesco di Valmarana, Partner in Pantheon's European Investment Team

One of the few certainties in an uncertain world is an increasing demand for the earth's resources, says Nino Tronchetti Provera, Managing Partner and Founder of Ambienta, which focuses on industrial growth investing in companies driven by a global mega-trend in environmental awareness and sustainability. Ambienta is based in Milan, Düsseldorf and London. "Sustainability is a long term trend we can be certain about. Sustainability is a theme, not a sector, and it affects every industry – from water pollution to food, and chemicals to the cooling economy," he tells Pantheon's Francesco di Valmarana.

"Europe is the leading continent for sustainability. Why? Because it doesn't benefit from any of its own abundance of natural resources, so it has been forced to use them wisely. As a consequence, we are 52% more efficient than the U.S in using energy, and we recycle three times more than the U.S. The big opportunity in Europe is to take small and medium-sized businesses global as these are the businesses that have the solutions everyone is waiting for."
